

Equal pay for similar work

INFORMATION SHEET

The Alberta Human Rights Act (the Act) prohibits discrimination based on the ground of gender.

Section 6(1) of the Act states: “Where employees of both sexes perform the same or substantially similar work for an employer in an establishment the employer shall pay the employees at the same rate of pay.” An employer may pay employees differently, even when they perform the same or similar work, but that difference in pay must not be based on their gender. Employers are entitled to pay employees different rates of pay based on factors such as experience, education and merit. These factors should be assessed objectively and applied consistently regardless of gender.

Job descriptions or classifications should reflect the total expectations of a position. In Alberta, different job descriptions for two similar positions do not legally justify a pay differential because one job is held by a man and the other by a woman. Section 6(2) of the Act specifies that an employer should not reduce an employee’s rate of pay to equalize pay rates between women and men.

In Alberta, it is the employer who is responsible for ensuring non-discriminatory employment practices. The employer must ensure that employees are hired, promoted, paid or dismissed according to objective guidelines, applied equally to both sexes.
